

Constitution of “University of Toronto Law and Ethics of Artificial Intelligence Students’ Association”

1. Article One – Name and Purpose

- 1.1. The official name of the recognized student group is “University of Toronto Law and Ethics of Artificial Intelligence Students’ Association”
- 1.2. The official acronym or abbreviation of the group is “LexAI”
- 1.3. The purpose, objectives, mission and/or mandate of the Law and Ethics of Artificial Intelligence (LexAI) organization is to foster discussions, conduct research, and promote awareness about the legal and ethical challenges posed by AI.

Recognizing the increasing impact and usage of artificial intelligence in society and in our school community, this association is focused on actively spreading awareness on ethical implications of AI decision-making, the influence on social issues and human rights, and much more as we discuss the tool of the future. This association will provide a platform for undergraduate students of all fields and levels of experience to have a seat at the table and contribute to the conversation. LexAI commits itself to create inclusive, and productive spaces to share opinions, theories and converse issues of topical interest with peers, professors and fellow community members.

LexAI acts as a mark of intersection between the two respective sciences and how they will continue to rely and impact each other through current and continuous technological advancements. Our pursuit of fueling interest, passion, and intellect starts through connecting with students. This includes a community run LexAI research journal with topics that are curated to the interests of our readers where members may catch up or contribute on current news and conversations. Along with events like workshops with researchers and professionals active in the field to promote and spark critical conversations, debates involving our LexAI community, panelist discussions creating educational and networking opportunities for students, and more. LexAI aims to bridge the gap between technological advancements and societal values through education, collaboration, and the encouragement of interest and participation from our community.
